5.75 million people have been infected by the virus, and 1.2 million have died. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that 100 million people are at risk of contracting the disease, especially in regions of central and southern Africa, where the virus is most prevalent. The WHO is currently conducting a large-scale survey of the disease in these areas.

The results of the present study are consistent with previous research that has shown that the use of a computer-based system can improve the accuracy of data collection and analysis in a laboratory setting (e.g., [10]).

Abstract The authors compare the results of two different methods of estimating the effect of the 1992 MMR on the rate of measles deaths in England and Wales. The first method uses a regression model with a time trend, and the second method uses a regression model with a time trend and a control variable for the rate of measles deaths in the United States. The results of the two methods are compared. The results of the two methods are compared. The results of the two methods are compared.

MNLF hits gov't-MILF deal

COTABATO CITY—FORMER ARMM GOV Nurul Husein, who is a ranking official of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), said on Sunday the Arroyo administration had misled and effectively duped the group as an ally when the government entered into an agreement with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) allowing the latter to divide the claims of an expanded Muslim region in the southern Philippines.

Husein, also the MNLF foreign minister, said the reason by phone the government did not consult the group before it entered into the agreement with the MILF.

Husein said the agreement was also an insult to the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) which had brokered the 1996 peace agreement between the government and the MNLF.

"It's a dirty game. I don't know how they can play with the Bangsamoro people," Husein said.

Earlier, MILF spokesperson Ed Kabulu said the government and the MILF had agreed in principle on the drafting of a constitution for an expanded Muslim region, the imposition of its own tax system and the establishment of a legal financial institution.

The present Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao comprises five provinces and one city.

The agreement was seen to leave the chances of success of the peace negotiations between the government and the MILF.

"We are still committed to the agreement we signed with the government... to the peace and development of Mindanao. But if this is the kind of government we have... They disregarded us as well as the Organization of the Islamic Conference. We will ask the OIC to do the same to them," Husein said.

Husein said MILF leaders would be traveling soon to discuss the issue.

"Even before the holding of the elections in the ARMM, we were not consulted. The ARMM is part of the final peace agreement. The government drew [out] not only me but the entire MNLF. I don't think the Bangsamoro people are stupid. I'm sorry. We are determined to bring this matter to the OIC," he said.

The Philippines has been trying to get the OIC to grant it observer status. Jeffrey Mosen, FDI Mindanao Bureau

QUAKE AID

Choppers now, mules afterward

By Danny Kemp

ZIARAT, PAKISTAN—HELICOPTERS FROM around the world have formed the backbone of efforts to help remote corners of quake-hit Pakistan, but when they go home relief officials say mules will take their place.

If the global mercy mission has a sound, it is the earsplitting thwump of up to 90 choppers a day flying over the cracked roofs of the region, sending vibrations like new tremors through the rubble.

The United States has deployed five giant twin-rotor CH-47 Chinooks, three sleek UH-60 Black Hawks and two powerful MH-53 Sea Stallions in the latest example of Washington's "helicopter diplomacy" in the developing world.

From Germany two American-built CH-53 Super Stallions have been a regular sight over the broken rooftops of the region.

Russian-made Mi-17s are used by the United Nations, the Red Cross and poverty-stricken Afghanistan, which has found itself in the unusual position of offering aid elsewhere and has sent four.

The mainstay of the helicopter relief effort however has been Pakistan itself, mobilizing more than 30 Mi-17s and US-made UH-1s—whose distinctive throb and fuselage-mounted skids are more familiar from Vietnam War films.

Without these fearsome pieces of technology, and their hardworking pilots, the aid effort after the quake that killed at least 38,000 people would never have got off the ground.

Helicopter crash

But in a sign of the risks involved, six Pakistani military personnel were killed Saturday when their Mi-17 crashed near the Kashmiri town of Bagh.

The bigger choppers ferry supplies to main towns like devastated Muzaffarabad and rush casualties back to the capital Islamabad—500 on Friday alone. They were vital in the early days when all roads to the quake zone were cut.

The smaller ones drop food, blankets and tents to the crushed hamlets that litter the valleys of the quake zone, and evacuate thousands of often critically injured survivors.

On one of the most challenging missions this week, the Pakistani Army flew in to Ziarat, a rabble of wooden houses teetering on the top of a 5,000-foot ridge in the devastated Jhelum Valley, southeast of Muzaffarabad.

Three times the Pakistani crew of a Vietnam-style UH-1 "Huey" tried to touch down on a patch of rocky ground barely bigger than their own helicopter, a steep precipice on either side, before they were successful.

Before the skids even touched the ground people had rushed from the wreckage of the village, bearing sick women and children wrapped in filthy blankets in their arms or lying on traditional wooden bedframes known as charpoys.

"You, not you," shouted one of the pilots who had jumped out of the cockpit, helping a woman with a bandaged head into the cramped cabin and fending off a gnarled old man clutching a small tear-stained boy.

Still more villagers crowded around and were nearly blown off their feet by the massive downdraft from the still-spinning blades as the helicopter's loading manager warned others away from the tail rotor.

Less than five minutes after landing, the helicopter lifted slowly then veered off at a drunken angle towards Muzaffarabad, 10 casualties in its belly, some weeping and others too sick to move.

Desperate appeal

UN and Pakistani officials have desperately appealed for the world to send more helicopters to help out. During a visit to Muzaffarabad on Friday, Information Minister Sheikh Rashid said extra choppers were vital.

One option remains out of the question—helicopters from Pakistan's neighbor and long-time foe India.

"There is a place with hundreds of helicopters that could easily bring food, blankets and tents, and that is in Indian Kashmir," a senior aid official said on condition of anonymity, referring to the disputed Himalayan territory that is split between New Delhi's and Islamabad's control.

"But the first thing the Pakistanis told us after the earthquake was that they would take helicopters from anywhere except India and Israel."

In any case, the helicopters are vulnerable to the weather—and that is about to turn for the worse.

Twice in the first week since the Oct. 8 quake heavy rain has stopped chopper flights and officials say conditions are about to deteriorate, with snow arriving Saturday on the mountains that loom over Muzaffarabad.

After the helicopters are grounded or have returned to their home countries, officials say mules are likely to bear the burden for getting supplies up twisting paths to cut-off villages.

The Pakistani Army has traditionally kept scores of the beasts for its military and humanitarian operations in the network of peaks and valleys in the rugged north.

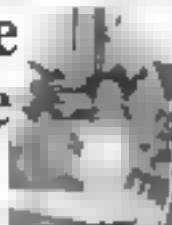

"They are capable of reaching the parts machines cannot reach," said a Pakistani Army spokesperson.

Mules have already begun to lug heavy loads to isolated villages near Balakot, a northwestern tourist town that suffered some of the most devastating damage in the quake.

Unpopular anger

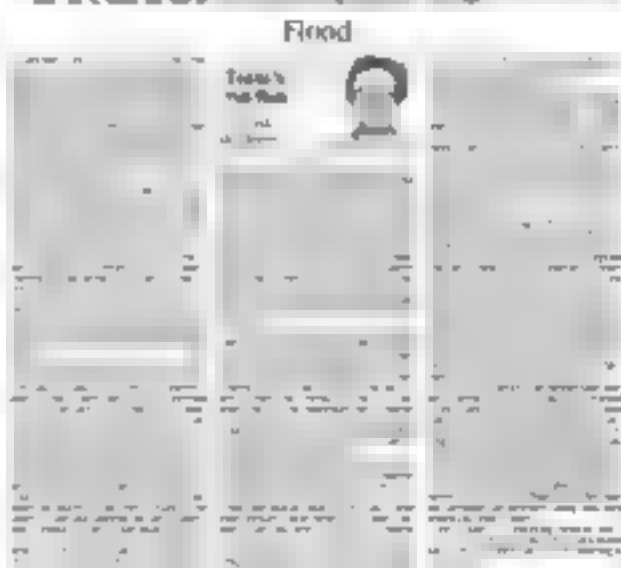

President Joseph Estrada's popularity has been on a roller coaster ride since he took office in June 1998. His approval rating has fluctuated between 40 percent and 80 percent, reflecting the public's mixed reaction to his administration. While some praise his efforts to reform the judiciary and the police, others are angry at his perceived corruption and incompetence. The public's anger is not just directed at the president but also at the political class and the media. The public feels that the political class is more concerned with power and money than with the welfare of the people. The media, on the other hand, is seen as biased and sensationalist. The public's anger is a reflection of the deep-seated problems in Philippine society, including poverty, corruption, and political instability. It is a warning to the leadership that the people are not satisfied with the current state of affairs and demand for change.

Unintended consequences

In the Philippines, the unintended consequences of government policies are often more significant than the intended ones. One example is the effect of the 1991 Philippine Education Reform Act. While the law aimed to improve the quality of education, it also led to a decline in the standards of public schools. Another example is the effect of the 1997 Philippine Tax Reform Act. While the law aimed to simplify the tax system, it also led to a decline in government revenue. The unintended consequences of government policies are often the result of a lack of foresight and a failure to consider the long-term effects of the policies. It is important for the government to be more proactive in identifying and addressing the unintended consequences of its policies. This can be done through a more comprehensive and integrated approach to policy-making, one that takes into account the social, economic, and environmental impacts of the policies. Only then can the government ensure that its policies are truly in the best interest of the people.

Court chains CX, Qantas

DISGRUNTLED CANTARY PACIFIC and Qantas have been prevented by the Pasaig Regional Trial Court from conducting their watchbuilding and cargo logistics business away from the controversial Pasaig/Pala Cargo wharf in Jolly Ching.

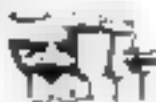

Despite having already given the required 60-day notice, the flying kangaroo airline had been stopped about last year from moving out its business from Ching, after the latter successfully obtained an injunction from Judge Francisco Manalita.

The same judge issued a temporary restraining order last week against Qantas after the Australian airline also asked twice that it, too, was unhappy with the terms of service that the Ching authority was giving it and that Qantas was unsuccessfully transferring its business to another local watchbuilding wharf.

According to the newspaper, the latter offices of the foreign airlines were "annoyed" after being informed that the Philippine judiciary had only given a legalistic "no-fly" order, leaving them with a service provided to them by the local authority, but also

More NW pricing power

FINANCIAL Market Northwest Airlines has picked another pricing strategy up its sleeve to boost competition to its profitable trans-Pacific routes.

For 2015, about the price of other trans-Pacific routes to Hong Kong, Northwest is offering monthly class-passes to the U.S. West Coast from Los Angeles to Seattle through the Pacific Rim area.

While the airline, the "N" class ticket may be bought only through the NW website, this strategy will be their good government to their local offices at the height of the Asian financial crisis. Unfortunately, this national pride and patriotism is not enough to shield the Philippine.

With the Philippine government, it is, unfortunately, people's beliefs and values is an important factor in changing people's hearts and minds, and the common good above personal welfare. Change in attitude precedes change in policy.

Finally, providing wide participation in policy-making mechanisms is the first step to the common good will be served by government policies. The third is to make sure decisions and policy-making participation to good decisions and these important quality steps.

The Philippines has been a long time in the region in this regard, that is, the political will depends on past leaders who had come and provided citizens and the Philippine participation by civil society and business in the justice government. Our continuing challenge lies in making such participation an effective addition to the self-serving purchases of the Philippine government to provide good governance of the Philippine.

and" summarizes their mission, patterned after the Christian commandment "to love one another." The building, an "open" structure, is the "meeting place" of the community, the "home" of the "new" and "old" members.

When a member arrives at a Synagogue through official channels and is welcomed, the welcoming committee, composed of members, greets the new member, offering them the opportunity to join the community, and to participate in the life of the Synagogue.

The words of Psalm 133 are the theme of the service, "How good and pleasant it is when brothers dwell in unity!"

It is a tradition of our community, known as "Shabbat Shalom," to greet the members of the community with a warm and friendly welcome.
